Grief will come to work! For many dealing with death and loss is a difficult but expected occupational reality. Grief informed policies and procedures, training, and human interactions can support the development of a response comprehensive enough to manage ongoing loss, transition, and the difficulty of death and trauma.

In this session, participants will :

- be oriented to assessment and intervention skills for supporting our teams and our organizations
- understand how best to respond to grief and loss as it relates to the workplace
- explore how loss specifically impacts teams and how they need to be supported
- learn how to support bereaved workers as individuals
- learn how to foster resilience in loss related situations
